

David J. Venlet
Vice Admiral, U. S. Navy (Retired)

David consults independently and serves as Chairman, Defense Acquisition University Board of Visitors. He delivers value creating insight and strategy options for clients drawing upon his record of results in stabilizing performance and restoring trust in the largest and most complex defense procurement program. He managed the $390B F-35 Joint Strike Fighter. Brought in by the Secretary of Defense to lead the program when it was facing possible cancellation by Congress he worked alongside a committed joint government and industry team that stabilized performance in test and production. With transparency and realism in high-risk communications, he restored trust in the program by the US and numerous partner nations.

He led a 24,000 person $30B organization, Naval Air Systems Command, providing engineering, test, logistics, contracting, financial and program management support for Department of the Navy aviation acquisition. Navair provided sustainment for over 3,000 aircraft and unmanned vehicles, enabling global aviation operations by the Navy and Marine Corps.

David is a retired Vice Admiral, U.S. Navy. He led large complex organizations and programs at the executive management level for 10 years as a flag officer. His career in defense acquisition covers 22 years and he flew F-14 Tomcats in fleet operations.

He is a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, Naval Postgraduate School, US Naval Test Pilot School and member of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots.